

Flint had read all of the adventure books she could get her paws on before her 'Long Walk' and could tell you all about almost every plant and animal in the forest.

She told Raven and Idaho that she knew about all the rocks in the river and was determined they should only stand on the grey boulders as they were the strongest.

I know lots of cool stuff.

If my yeti adventure book says we should choose grey rocks, then that's what we should do.

