

The three yetis froze.
Humans!!

Right there, only a few paw-steps away.

Without a word, they scrambled backwards and squeezed themselves deep into a prickly bush.

Branches poked their fur, but none of them dared move.

Flint pulled out her adventure book and flipped frantically through the pages.

"I know there's a chapter on hiding
from humans," she whispered.

"they might see us if we look over the bush so stay low and stay still!"

Raven held his breath.
Idaho held his paws
over his eyes.

And Flint kept reading,
determined to keep them
all safe until the humans
went away.