

Idaho never claimed he was an expert in anything, not like Flint or Raven, but he was wise for a young yeti and he liked to think things through properly.

He knew that if he worked hard on a problem, tried lots of different ideas and didn't give up, he was bound to solve it in the end. That was just how his brain liked to work.

Idaho dreamed of being a detective when he grew up - investigating mysteries, cracking secret codes and finding answers to tricky problems that no one else could solve.

What are those two fur-balls doing, they're both soaked?

Flint ???
Raven ???